"The South 40"

Thanksgiving week may be a strange time to schedule a corn field day, but we sure had a fine turn out on the Carson Farm last week. Dick Carter and his boys prepared the bar-b-que chicken. Dick tells me that 60 people were served and a few left before lunch.

There was a lot of interest in the four-row corn planter that the Carson Farm used for the first time this year. The John Deere 45 Picker-Sheller was likewise an interest-getter. The mechanization of corn harvest has been accomplished on this farm. Metal bins are used for drying and augers move the grain from wagon to bin to grinder-mixer to the milking room.

Working with the Pioneer Seed folks there were nine corn varieties in the test plot.

Due to wet conditions the corn wasn't planted until June 12. Ten days before the field day 12 samples were taken from each variety, stalks and ears counted, weighed and tested for moisture. The nine varieties averaged 121 bu/per acre and had an average population of 15, 283 stalks per acre. We had hoped to get closer to 20,000 stalks.

The land received 160 pounds of N and 80 pounds of P and K. For week control 3 pounds of Sutan and 1 pound of Atrazine were discedin. Later 2,4-D was used to catch any late broadleaf weeds.

The varieties had the following stands and yields; because this test was not replicated, the use of this data is very limited:

3191, 13,205 stalks -- 86 bu.
3151, 14,855 stalks -- 123 bu.
3179, 15,956 stalks -- 148 bu.
3571, 15, 956 stalks -- 116 bu.
3147, 16,506 stalks -- 146 bu.
511A, 13, 755 stalks -- 129 bu.
3048, 15,406 stalks -- 104 bu.
3369A, 17,056 stalks -- 127 bu.
X8535, 14,855 stalks -- 113 bu.

The last variety was experimental and will not be offered for sale. 3179 and 3147 are both MDM tolerant.

December is a good time to mulch strawberries. Mulch helps maintain soil moisture, keeps berries out of the sand, extends dormancy, thus helping to avoid frost damage.

Bales of straw should be placed along the row, cut the ties -- water down the straw and cover with a piece of black polyethylene to seal in themoisture.

Any grain or weed seed will sprout and die by Christmas time.

TRANSCO ANNOUNCES PERSONNEL CHANGES

Four major executive changes have been announced by the board of directors of Transcontinental Gas Pipe Line Corporation.

G. Montgomery Mitchell has been named president, cheif executive officer, and a director of the company effective January 1, 1972.

He will replace President James B. Henderson, who had requested and has been granted early retirement by that date.

Senior Vice President John F. Burton takes mandatory retirement at the same time and will be succeeded by Francis J. Quinn, who will be in charge of all financial and accounting activities for the company.

Mitchell, who has been serving as executive vice president of the corporation since September 1971, came to the company from New York City where he was vice president of both Stone & Webster Management Consultants, Inc., and Stone & Webster Canada, Ltd.

Burton first moved to Transco October 1, 1948, as vice president and treasurer. In 1955 he became financial vice president and was named a director in 1965, in which latter position he will continue. He has been a senior vice president since January 1969.

Prior to joining Transco, he served with Virginia Electric & Power Company and later with Stone & Webster Service Corporation, leaving that firm as assistant treasurer. His many memberships in the business world include the American Gas Association, Southern Gas Association, and the American Management Association. He is also a trustee of the University of Houston Foundation.

Quinn will assume his post as senior vice president from his present positon with Transco as vice president. His long service in the oil and gas field dates back to the mid-30's.

STONEWALL

Jaycee Parade For Christmas Friday

On Friday, Dec. 3, the Farmville Jaycees are presenting what they hope to be the biggest, most colorful Christmas Parade ever held in Farmville.

Jaycees have been working for the past three months securing bands, contacting businesses, and talking to Santa Claus at the North Pole to make sure that all will be ready for the Farmville Parade.

As an added attraction for the youngsters, Bozo the Clown from WTVR in Richmond will be the Grand Marshall of the parade. Also included will be the performance of the Appomattox County High School Band.

Be sure you are in Farmville early on Friday night, Dec. 3, so you can [illegible]
